Faces of Science: John Gordon

March 4, 2015

Passion for solutions to energy problems

John Gordon uses his passion for energy science to help solve significant problems.

1:07

Faces of Science: John Gordon

John Gordon’s passion grew while attending school in Scotland, where a series of chemistry and physics teachers instilled in him a sense of curiosity as to how things worked in nature and the universe.

He is currently developing methods that use carbohydrates as renewable and sustainable sources of hydrocarbon fuels.

Like his Scottish teachers, John works to motivate younger scientists toward tackling important societal problems.

Read more:The drive toward hydrogen vehicles just got shorter »2011 Fellows Prize for Leadership in Science or Engineering »

John Gordon works for C-IIAC's Inorganic Isotope & Actinide Chemistry group.

Los Alamos National Laboratory www.lanl.gov (505) 667-7000 Los Alamos, NM

Operated by Los Alamos National Security, LLC for the Department of Energy's NNSA