

Abstract:

The path to exascale computing is riddle with difficult issues - power, resiliency, programming model among them – but data issues – what information to extract, move, and store – dominate.

This talk will demonstrate several looming issues of understanding science at exascale, and propose a path to addressing them.