

Bradbury Science Museum Association open for business

November 1, 2016

Formed in cooperation with the Bradbury Science Museum, the Bradbury Science Museum Association is a nonprofit organization that will support volunteer opportunities, expand Museum outreach, and build support for the Museum's education mission.

The organization recently launched its webpages and Facebook media. Association memberships range in price from $35 a year for students, educators, and seniors to $75 a year for families. Each membership includes access to hundreds of out-of-region museums across the country. Of course, tax-deductible donations of all sizes are happily accepted to help the new organization ramp up its work under its IRS 501(c)(3) nonprofit status.

Looking for on-site volunteers

A priority of the organization is launching a small store to be located in the Museum's lobby. Volunteers are needed for two hours at a time to serve as points of contact for purchases. If you are interested in helping in this or a different capacity, visit the organization's volunteering webpages to learn more.

We're very happy the Association is in place, and we look forward to working with it to expand our educational efforts.
